This Colonial Revival style home made of brown brick is a combination of conservative colonial style detailing and decorative woodwork. This stately house welcomes visitors onto the center columned porch and through the paneled front door flanked by decorative elliptical tracery transom and sidelights into a warm and friendly environment. While the influence of colonial America is seen in a combination of small pane sash windows topped with a center keystone lintel on the first story and the shuttered second story windows, an interesting multi-paned glass door with small pane sidelights opens onto the front entry porch roof. Along the eaves front slate roof the eye is entertained with a center gabled dormer flanked by round arch dormers while parapet chimneys with semi-circular attic windows anchor the gable ends.

309 West Clifford Street

*Home of Richard and Melanie Lewis
David Logan, House Chair
Debbie Langfitt, Decorator*

The charm of this c.1910 house comes from the diversity of its late Queen Anne style and early 20th century building technology. The 2 ½-story façade covered with clapboard and shaped shingles is punctuated by a two-story semi-circular bay topped with a turned finial and an upper story wing-tip gable dormer. A variety of windows with 6/1 sash, clustered 2/1 sash and colored small pane glass light the interior and decorate the façade. The asymmetrical porch with paired attenuated columns welcomes all to the oval beveled glass front door.

403 West Clifford Street

This home is locally known as the Nancy Larrick house. It was constructed in 1926 by Nancy Larrick's parents. Behind a limestone wall this 2 1/2-story brick Colonial Revival style house exhibits a strong symmetrical facade with an eaves front roof supported by a dentil cornice. Its front Doric columned porch leads to a center hall door with small pane transom and sidelights which is flanked by large tripartite windows. The second-story is opened with 6/1 sash windows. Exterior end chimneys are flanked by quarter round attic lights.

415 West Clifford Street

*Home of John and Elizabeth Quinn
Linda Ross Gibbs, House Chair
Debbie Langfitt, Decorator*

The symmetry and order of the Colonial Revival style combined with the textural variety of the Queen Anne style has influenced the creation of this 2 ½-story house built in the early 20th century with shingles and stucco. A wrought iron fence welcomes visitors to the first-story front porch supported by Doric columns. A paneled door surrounded by a fanlight transom and decorative shaped sidelights opens to the center hallway. The hipped roof with triple vertical pane windows in the dormer extends over 8/8 sash windows on the symmetrical façade.

Ascending halfway up the gentle hill of Clifford Street is this 2 ½-story Colonial Revival style house of brick and stucco. The gradual rise of an eaves front roof is outlined with a dentil cornice. Paired 9/9 sash windows on the second story and three-part 9/9 sash windows on the first story light the house interior. The front porch, with fluted Doric columns and a low railing with turned balustrade, enhances the symmetrical façade with a dentil cornice and center paneled doorway flanked with sidelights.

Brookie Phillips & Carol Ambrogio, Decorators

Originally known as the Thomas Phillips house, this brick 3-bay Federal style home with its parapet chimneys, Colonial Revival style front entry porch and two-story northeast porch addition has graced the front of Boscawen Street since c.1820. The house retains its delicate Federal style woodwork with six panel doors, bulls eye surrounds, five Winchester mantels, 6/6 sash windows and front hallway fanlight.

Musicians from the Symphony of the Valley will perform Saturday and Sunday at the Barton Event Center.
